The accountant / advisior you are inviting to access your data, must already have signed themselves up in Cashminder and given themselves a "username" in Cashminder, which will probably be their email address.

Enter this username in the box "user to invite".

You should give the accountant the security role of "Adviser" (the other option here is partner, where the farmer is sending an invite to his farm partner. This partner would be able to invite someone else to see the farm data, where as an advisor cannot do that)

As owner of your farm data, you can decide whether to give your accountant/ advisor either edit rights or view rights (only) to your data, at your discretion. If you do give "edit" rights, any changes that your accountant makes to your data will be recorded. Hit "Send invite" button below

When your accountant logs into Cashminder, they will that they have Received an invitation and once they accept that invite, when the farmer logs in again, they now see that their accountant has a connection to their farm, which they can break at any time. See below /
